

Abstract

The invention relates to a process for the preparation of granules comprising an oily substance. It relates also to granules for a pharmaceutical formulation and to a tablet as a product of further processing.